About Vétoquinol

Vétoquinol, established in 1933, is an independent veterinary pharmaceutical laboratory for both commercial animal breeding and pets. This family-owned group, dedicated to animal health, is the world's largest laboratory in its field, and makes 77% of its sales on export markets.

Its business includes research on production and marketing of drugs and dietetic products. Among the 700 products marketed by the group, the ones coming from Vétoquinol R&D now account for more than 60% of sales.

Vétoquinol, positioned in the treatment field, displays particular expertise in 3 major therapeutic fields: anti-infection agents, pain and anti-inflammatories, and cardiology-nephrology.

The group, which has devoted great attention to the international sector since the outset, now distributes its products in about one hundred countries (Europe, North America and Asia), working through its 16 subsidiaries and a network of 110 distributor partners. As of the end of 2005, the company had more than 1,100 employees worldwide.
